Applying for a licence to practise as a doctor

Doctors examine patients, make findings, diagnose illnesses, determine therapeutic measures and carry out medical treatments and interventions.

The profession of doctor is regulated in Germany. This means that in order to be able to work as a doctor in Germany without restriction, you need a licence to practise medicine.

Temporary practice of the medical profession or practice limited to a specific activity is permitted on the basis of a permit, the so-called professional licence. Both the Approbation and the Berufserlaubnis are the state admission to the profession.

The professional permit can be applied for in the state of Berlin in connection with an application for the licence to practise medicine.

In order to obtain the professional permit, it is determined whether the professional qualification you have completed in a so-called third country is complete. Third countries are all states that do not belong to the European Union (EU), the European Economic Area (EEA) or Switzerland.

In addition to the completion of the professional qualification, you must also fulfil other requirements for the granting of the permit. Further requirements are, for example, sufficient German language skills and health suitability.

If your professional qualification originates from the EU, the EEA or Switzerland, a professional permit will only be granted in rare individual cases. In this case, the regulations on the granting of a licence to practise apply with priority.

You can also submit the application for the procedure from abroad.

Procedure

1. Application

You submit an application for the granting of permission to temporarily exercise the medical profession (professional permit) in addition to the application for the granting of the licence to practise medicine to the competent body. The competent body then checks whether your training has been completed and corresponds to the German training and whether all other requirements have been met. If your training has been completed and the other requirements have been met, the professional permit can be granted concurrently with the Approbation as part of the recognition procedure.

2. Verification of the completion of the training

The competent body checks whether your professional qualification from abroad has been fully completed in the country of study or, if applicable, the country of origin and is comparable to the German professional qualification, i.e. a professional aptitude for exercising the profession is given.

3. Possible results of the examination

- If your professional qualification is completed, your foreign professional qualification will be recognised with a view to issuing a professional licence. The authority can confirm the result to you in writing. You still have to fulfil the other requirements and prove your language skills. Then you will be granted the professional permit.

- If you have only completed your studies, but not the compulsory practical part (internship, ordination or similar), you can apply for a professional permit to complete your training. This requires the certificate of completion of the foreign higher education degree as well as a description of which further training sections are to be completed at which training institutions according to foreign training law with a professional permit in Germany. Furthermore, proof of entitlement to limited practice of the medical profession in the previous country of study must be submitted, as well as a certificate from the previous country of study stating that the medical activity completed with the professional permit will be recognised in Germany for the training qualification or will enable the completion of the final examination required under foreign training law.
- It is also possible, if only the studies have been completed but not the compulsory practical part (internship, ordination or similar), for your academic achievements to be credited to a course of study here in order to obtain the degree under German law and thus an EU qualification.
