Weapons legislation – Applying for/renewing a firearms licence for the security industry

You need a firearms licence for the security industry and an arms possession card for carrying firearms subject to a licence if you intend to perform or provide support for security activities, such as protection of people or property or transport of money and valuables. The licence for carrying a weapon is valid for a limited period of up to three years and can be renewed twice for up to three years each.

Employees that act based on instructions need a firearms licence only, and no arms possession card. If you are an employee in the security industry, the issued firearms licence is handed over to the responsible person acting on behalf of your employer.

Security activities for which no licence is required

- No firearms licence for the security industry is required for security activities that are performed on enclosed property with approval of the person who has the right to determine who shall be allowed or denied access.
- However, a declaration of consent from the authority is needed, stating that there are no objections regarding the provision of company weapons for performing security activities for which no licence is required.

Notes on application

The following services can be applied for:

- Issuance of a firearms licence
- Renewal of an existing firearms licence before expiration of its validity period
- Renewal of an existing firearms licence after expiration of its validity period: legally this is not considered a renewal but re-granting. Higher charges may apply in this case. Please select the “renewal” option in your application also in this case.
