Trade - Request temporary continuation without qualified substitution

After the death of a trader, a trade may be carried on for the account of

- of the surviving spouse or civil partner,
- the minor heir during the minor age, or
- the executor, administrator or executrix of the estate for a period of up to 10 years, as a rule, only a qualified representative may continue to operate the business.

However, upon application, the competent authority may temporarily allow the trade to continue to be operated without a qualified representative for a period of one year after the death of the trader.

Special regulations exist for individual trades (for example craft trade or catering trade); they remain unaffected.

Procedure:

1. Immediately after the death of the trader, you apply to the competent authority for the intended continuation of the business without a qualified deputy.
2. The authority examines your application. In case of a positive decision, you will receive a notice that you may continue the business for up to one year without a qualified representative. After the expiry of this period, you must appoint a qualified deputy.
