Apply for recognition of foreign educational qualifications at vocational college and technical college level for non-regulated professions

In principle, if you hold a professional qualification obtained abroad that corresponds to a non-regulated profession, you can start working in Germany straight away. To help potential employers better assess your professional skills, you have the option of having the equivalence of your foreign professional qualification recognised as equivalent to a non-regulated school-based vocational qualification governed by state law.

This equivalence certificate can then make it easier for you to access the German labour market. The certificate confirms that your vocational qualification is fully or partially equivalent to a German vocational qualification (the so-called reference occupation).

What are non-regulated professions?

In the case of non-regulated professions, entry into the profession or the practice of the profession is not subject to state regulations. This applies in particular to apprenticeships within the dual system, but also to most school-based vocational training and further training programmes regulated by state law. If the profession is not regulated by the state in Germany, you can apply for jobs on the German labour market directly with a foreign professional qualification or set up your own business.

Procedure:

1. Seek advice

Make use of the support offered by experienced advisory services. In the Further Information section, you will find links to the advisory services “Anerkennung beruflicher Abschlüsse Plus”, “Beratungs- und Informationsstelle berufliche Anerkennung (BibA)” and “La Red Anerkennungsberatung Plus”.

2. Check the reference occupation

The reference occupation is the German occupation against which your foreign vocational qualification is to be compared. This reference occupation must be a training occupation in Berlin. You will find the following lists for comparison in the ‘Further information’ section.

Initial training:

- List of vocational qualifications regulated by state law at vocational schools for the purpose of determining the equivalence of initial training
- Comparison of dual vocational training qualifications and those regulated by state law (reference list of occupations)

Further and continuing education:

- List of vocational qualifications regulated by state law at technical colleges for the purpose of determining the equivalence of further and continuing education

- Compilation of further education qualifications regulated by federal law and continuing education qualifications regulated by state law (reference list of occupations)

3. Submit your application

Send the completed application form, together with the required documents, to the Senate Administration either online, by email or by post (copies only).

4. Confirmation and review

Once your application has been received, you will receive confirmation of receipt within one month. If any documents are missing, you will be notified and can submit them at a later date.

5. Decision

Processing takes a maximum of three months once all the necessary documents have been submitted. You will then receive a decision confirming full, partial or no equivalence.
